Wheelchair Accessible Play

All Kidstuff Playsystems' play equipment is made to be ADA compliant, designed to have handicapped accessible access, accessible elevated play and ground play events on ALL Kidstuff playgrounds. Any playsystem you pick from our website will be in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, either by itself or in combination with freestanding ground play.

That said, some designs are easier than others to get around on if you use a wheelchair. Likewise, some ground play is easier and more fun to use, and lets kids of all abilities play together. This packet features those designs.

There are Playsystems, Games, Activity Panels and - Walls, Swings, Slides and Sports featured here. There's a separate price sheet that covers what's shown here. And there are other choices, these are just some of the best. As I said, everything we make is ADA compliant on the playground.

For ease of movement, these are mostly ramped playsystems. You will find that they seem more expensive than other commercial playsystems of similar size. They are. It's the ramps. Each one is a large steel fabricated piece, which is not cheap. And each one is only allowed to rise 6in in 6 feet—so to rise 36 inches, you have to use 6 six-foot ramps, plus decks every 12 feet. It's a lot of steel, a lot of space, and tends to be a lot of money. A transfer module (looks like extra-wide, shallow steps) would rise those same 36 inches in one 5ft long piece, and it is ADA compliant and much less expensive, but to use it, a child has to lift herself out of her wheelchair and scoot up the steps. The playsystems in this package are take-your-chair-with-you playsystems, for at least part of their length. Some are ramped entirely, most ramp access to lower levels and transfer access to upper levels.

This list is a place to start. From here we'll customize your inclusive playground.
